Martin Kaymer made the putt that mattered – an uphill 10-footer for birdie that gave him the PGA Grand Slam of Golf title to add to a special season of performances.

The U.S. Open Champion was a step better on the greens than his playing partners as his putts were usually to save par on a day when the foursome had 11 bogeys and two double bogeys among them on the back nine alone.

Kaymer led for 35 of the 36 holes at Port Royal Golf Course. The most telling moment of the final day, however, might have been at the first hole, when he drained a putt from 32 feet to save par and Watson missed from five feet for birdie.

That set the tone for the front nine. With Kaymer slightly wayward off the tee, Watson and the rest just couldn't take advantage of the situation. Watson missed makeable birdie putts on five of the first six holes and was still just two shots behind Kaymer through seven.

"It felt like nobody really wanted to win around the turn," said Kaymer, who picked up a winner's check for $600,000. "It was an up-and-down round."

His two-shot lead became one, then disappeared altogether when the German had back-to-back bogeys at Nos. 9 and 10 – the second when his tee shot hit a tree and found deep rough.

Watson, who shared the lead after 10 holes at 6-under par, made back-to-back bogeys at Nos. 11 and 12. And it briefly looked like Kaymer, who birdied No. 12 to open up a three-shot lead, might run away.

A run of three birdies from Watson changed things, and with Kaymer bogeying No. 16, the two-shot lead had switched to the Masters Champion. That cushion lasted less than 20 minutes.

On the par-5 17th, Watson opted to hit driver off the forward tee and promptly put the ball in the water on the left side of the fairway. Kaymer hit the middle of the fairway and walked off with a birdie while Watson bogeyed, and they walked down the last hole tied.

"Truthfully, if we look at it in hindsight, it's easy to look back, but if this was a four-day tournament we were playing, it would probably be a 4-wood off the tee or a 3-iron with that tee location," said Watson.

"Today, I was just, let's try to see how manly I am with the driver, and I wasn't very manly," he added. "I hit it in the water."

Then came the missed putts and, just as he did in the 2010 PGA Championship and the 2014 Ryder Cup singles, Kaymer beat Watson in a tight situation. "You don't want to win a golf tournament that way," said Kaymer. "Of course, I would take it, but you don't really want the other guy missing a short putt."

Rory McIlroy, a two-time major champion in 2014, finished third, once shot better than Jim Furyk.

2013

Masters Champion Adam Scott made his first trip to Bermuda a record-breaking command performance by capturing the 31st PGA Grand Slam of Golf. The second Australian behind his idol, Greg Norman, to win the season's showcase of major champions, Scott rallied from a four-stroke deficit to U.S.

Open Champion Justin Rose with 10 holes to play for a 7-under-par 64. That broke the Port Royal Golf Course 18-hole record by one stroke.

Scott pulled ahead of Rose, his good friend, by hitting a 6-iron approach from 190 yards on the par-5 17th hole. The ball landed two inches from the hole for a tap-in eagle. Rose pulled his approach and had to settle for par. Scott closed with the luxury of a two-putt par for victory at 18, and a 36-hole total of 8-under-par 134.

Rose opened with a 67 and closed with a 69. PGA Champion Jason Dufner, who began the second round two strokes back, fell off the pace quickly and was never a serious threat. He closed with a 70 to finish alone in third. Padraig Harrington, a three-time major champion, had a 71 and finished 11 strokes behind. The defending PGA Grand Slam Champion, Harrington received a berth in the elite foursome when Open Champion Phil Mickelson elected not to play.

Scott became the eighth player to rally for victory in the PGA Grand Slam of Golf since the 36-hole, stroke-play format was implemented in 1991. Scott collected the traditional pink jacket awarded in Bermuda to add to the green jacket he won last April at Augusta National.

The parallel goes beyond fashion. Scott also used a 6-iron on the second playoff hole at Augusta National when he defeated Angel Cabrera – but this one in Bermuda came from a new set that he began using two weeks earlier. Rose started strong, making four consecutive birdies on holes 4-7 to build a three-shot lead over Scott. As the rain subsided, Scott caught fire with birdies at 13 and 15, after Rose narrowly missed a 30-foot birdie putt. Rose then hit a drive that found the hazard at 16, and settled for bogey. Scott had his opening.

Scott erased the course record of 65 set by Lucas Glover in 2009 and got a bonus from Bermuda Premier Craig Cannonier, who presented Scott an honorary membership at the course.

Ireland's Padraig Harrington said that he was overdue for a picture postcard moment in Bermuda. Bolstered by a steady performance and the luxury of needing only a bogey on the final hole, he went on to claim victory in the 30th PGA Grand Slam of Golf. The last man to gain entry into the field, Harrington shook off memories of playoff defeats in 2007 and 2008 by posting a 4-under-par 67. That was enough to hold off reigning U.S. Open Champion Webb Simpson by one stroke.

Harrington, who replaced injured Open Champion Ernie Els just four days prior to the first round, became only the second European, after Ian Woosnam in 1991, to win the event. The 41-year-old Harrington lost Grand Slam titles at Bermuda's Mid Ocean Club in 2007 and 2008, and had not enjoyed any success since capturing the Asian Tour's Iskandar Johor Open in Malaysia two years and a week prior to his Bermuda trip.

Harrington earned the first-place check of $600,000 with a 9-under-par 133 total. Simpson closed his debut in the season-ending showcase event with a 65, matching the Port Royal Golf Course record. Keegan Bradley, the 2011 PGA Grand Slam of Golf Champion, posted a 67, sharing third at 139 with Masters Champion Bubba Watson, who had a 71.

Harrington came out firing in the second round, driving the 380-yard fifth and two-putting for birdie, and answering a Simpson birdie at the 193-yard eighth by making a 35-footer. Simpson saw the momentum shift at the start of the back nine. Harrington made birdies at 11, 12 and 13 to move to 10-under par, four shots clear at that point. Simpson could not answer during that stretch of holes, missing short putts at 11 and 12. Simpson attempted to claw back, with birdies at 14 and 17 to trim the deficit to two strokes. However, it was Harrington's day, as he sunk an eight-footer for par on 16, which was accompanied by a pumped fist, and effectively sealed a victory.

Bradley became the first defending PGA Grand Slam champion to gain a berth at the event when reigning PGA Champion Rory McIlroy withdrew in September due to a scheduling conflict.

Keegan Bradley performed a new feat among his major champion peers by playing the “rabbit” and being chased to the finish. After posting a 4-under-par 67 to share the first-round lead at Port Royal Golf Course, Bradley found himself clinging to the lead over the final 18 holes on a gusty day. He needed a hard-earned par on the 18th hole to hold off Masters Champion Charl Schwartzel to capture the “Champion of Champions” title.

The fourth youngest player to win the PGA Grand Slam of Golf, the 25-year-old Bradley holed a five-footer on the 18th to complete an even-par 71, and finish at 4-under-par 138. That was a stroke better than Schwartzel, who sizzled on the front nine with five consecutive birdies on the way to a course record-tying 6-under-par 65.

Schwartzel made a 30-foot putt at the fifth hole to ignite his five-birdie run, which he capped off at No. 9 when he chipped in from a greenside bunker. With overnight co-leaders Bradley and U.S. Open Champion Rory McIlroy spinning their wheels, Schwartzel made the turn sharing the lead at 2-under-par.

Bradley made a move to steady himself with a birdie at 10, and dueled with Schwartzel for the lead but never lost a one-stroke advantage. Schwartzel bogeyed No. 13 when he missed the green, and though he got the stroke back at 15, Bradley stayed solid and was the only one of the group to hit the 16th green at perhaps the peak of the windy afternoon.

After hitting what he called the best shot of his life to eagle No. 7 in the first round, Bradley hit an equally impressive approach at the par-5 17th hole, nailing a 195-yard 3-hybrid. He narrowly missed his eagle putt and carried the one-stroke edge to the 18th tee. Bradley gave most of the credit for that to his caddie Steve “Pepsi” Hale. Schwartzel’s round was even more impressive considering the wind that swirled around the course, although the Masters champion said he knew that a change in the conditions was his only chance of making a run at the leaders.

2010

Ernie Els won’t forget his first trip to Bermuda after recapturing something he had lost for most of the journey – a golden putting touch. “I’ve always said when I putted my best, I set up the way I’m going to hit a 7-iron,” said Els, who had spent time working on his putting the night before. “That’s what I started doing the back nine.”

That set-up worked to perfection for Els down the closing stretch at Port Royal Golf Course, as he made three consecutive birdies to turn back David Toms’ seemingly unfettered march to victory in the 28th PGA Grand Slam of Golf. By his victory, Els set a mark for the longest time between PGA Grand Slam victories – 13 years and became the fifth multiple winner of the event. He grinded through a day of nearly 30-mile per hour gusts by posting a 2-under par 69 in Southampton, Bermuda to finish with a 36-hole total of 5- under-par 137. That was good for a one-stroke triumph over Toms, the 2001 PGA Champion who replaced injured Open Champion Louis Oosthuizen late last week, and turned in a 71.

Els took home $600,000, and Toms $300,000. Reigning U.S. Open Champion Graeme McDowell, who had a 73, and PGA Champion Martin Kaymer, who closed with a 71, shared third at 145 and each earned $225,000.

Els had trailed Toms by three strokes with five holes left to play, seemingly unable to crack through at any time.

Els first saw an opening at No. 12, facing a 12-foot putt for birdie with Toms sailing his approach off the back of the green. However, Toms battled back by chipping in for birdie, before Els missed his attempt and followed with a bogey at 13 to fall behind three strokes.

Toms chipped in again, this time for a par at 14, and still owned a two-stroke cushion after Els ran home a 15-foot birdie putt. “I thought when a guy does it (chip in) once, you’re thinking, ‘good shot,’” said Els. “When he does it twice in three holes, you’re thinking maybe he’s destined to win this thing.”

Toms had held the lead for 30 holes of the 36-hole event until things began to unravel. “To be honest, it took a bit of the pressure off me in a way where I free-wheeled it. I was just trying to see how close I could get to him,” said Els. “Then he made a mistake on 15, I made birdie, he made bogey, and that was a big change.”

2009 Lucas Glover broke out a new set of irons to face a threesome of major champions, and arrived in Bermuda having not spent much time on the practice range.

In the end, it was one stick - his old putter - that allowed Glover to claim bragging rights as Champion of Champions in the 27th PGA Grand Slam of Golf.

Glover, the reigning U.S. Open Champion, played like a guy enjoying his vacation - at ease and carrying just enough tools to make an impact over 36 holes in his debut on the island paradise.

He collected 13 birdies and an eagle over two days in the season-ending showcase, while posting rounds of 65 and 66 on Port Royal Golf Course. His 11-under-par 131 was the third-lowest 36-hole total in PGA Grand Slam of Golf history.

Masters Champion Angel Cabrera, the 2007 PGA Grand Slam champion, closed with a 66 to finish five strokes back at 136. British Open Champion Stewart Cink was third at 137 and PGA Champion Y.E. Yang, an admitted victim of jet lag, was fourth at 141.

Glover opened the final round with a two-stroke advantage over Cink. That didn't last long as Cink grabbed the lead outright at No. 4, when Glover hit his approach into a greenside bunker.

Glover again found his putting stroke, making three consecutive birdies at Nos. 9, 10 and 11 to turn his 8-under-par tie with Cink into a two-shot lead.

But, Glover's turnaround came on the 383-yard, par-4 12th hole when he knocked home an eight-foot par putt. Meanwhile, Cabrera - who had been making a small charge of his own - missed a six-foot birdie putt that could have closed the deficit.

Adding birdies at Nos. 15 and 17 to soar to 12-under par, Glover was in cruise control, headed to don the ceremonial pink jacket that has become Bermuda's apparel of choice for the Champion of Champions.

The only duel left was for second, and Cink eagled the par-5 17th and came into the final hole tied with Cabrera. Cink missed the green and failed to get up and down for par. Cabrera parred and earned runner-up honors.

26TH PGA GRAND SLAM OF GOLF

2008 Jim Furyk was unflappable in a day of rollercoaster momentum swings, recovering with a birdie on the 18th hole and then returning soon after to knock home a six-foot eagle putt in a sudden-death playoff to defeat Padraig Harrington for his second PGA Grand Slam of Golf title.

It was the second consecutive playoff conducted in the PGA Grand Slam of Golf at Mid Ocean Club in Tucker's Town, Bermuda, and each time Harrington - the PGA Player of the Year - had owned a one-stroke lead on to the final tee only to come away defeated.

Furyk, who also won the 2003 title, earned $600,000 after wrapping up his fourth PGA Grand Slam of Golf appearance. He posted a closing 2-under-par 68 to match Harrington and deadlock after 36 holes at 4-under-par 136.

Returning to the 18th tee, Harrington and Furyk each had eagle putts on the par-5, 500-yard hole. Harrington, who captured this past summer's British Open and PGA Championship with his putting, hit his putt with too much speed as it hit the back of the cup and popped out to a couple of feet away.

Furyk followed by making his six-foot eagle putt for the victory.

Retief Goosen, a two-time U.S. Open champion who earned a berth in the 26th edition of the PGA Grand Slam of Golf as an alternate, finished third at 1-over-par 141 after a 71. Masters Champion Trevor Immelman was fourth after a closing 69, which atoned for an opening-round 76.

2007 U.S. Open Champion Angel Cabrera, who once admitted that he would be a soccer player had he not taken up golf, scored his version of a timely goal, to win the 25th PGA Grand Slam of Golf.

Cabrera rallied from a near-disastrous triple bogey on the first hole of the second round, then capped his wild rollercoaster day with a birdie-eagle finish to force a playoff then defeat Ireland's Padraig Harrington, the reigning British Open Champion, on the third extra hole.

Both players finished the 36 holes of regulation play at 4-under-par 136 at challenging Mid Ocean Club in Tucker's Town, Bermuda. It was the first PGA Grand Slam of Golf – the annual showcase for the year's major champions – conducted outside the United States.

Cabrera posted a closing 68 and Harrington a 69 as they made up the third sudden death playoff in event history, and first since 2000, when Tiger Woods defeated Vijay Singh.

After matching pars on the first two extra holes, Cabrera returned to the 18th tee and again reached the 521-yard, par-5 hole in two shots. His 4-iron approach shot came to rest 18 feet below the hole, while Harrington needed three shots to reach the green after driving into a fairway bunker and recovering from there to deep rough.

Harrington missed a 50-foot birdie putt, while Cabrera two-putted and tapped in for a victory and a first-place check of $600,000.

Cabrera also overcame a bogey on the 16th hole, leaving himself two strokes behind Harrington. He rallied with a birdie on the par-3 17th from 14 feet and then hit a 3-iron from 240 yards at the 18th that caught the slope and rolled to within four feet of the flagstick.

A gallery estimated at 7,000 witnessed the final round and saw a late thriller despite Harrington owning a four-stroke lead with 11 holes to play. He had continually held off challenges by Masters Champion Zach Johnson, and past U.S. Open winner Jim Furyk.

Furyk, making his third Grand Slam appearance, was the first alternate to replace PGA Champion Tiger Woods, who declined the invitation for the first time he was eligible. Furyk finished third at 138 after a 67, earning $250,000. Johnson closed with a 68 and was fourth at 139, pocketing $200,000.

2006 After a shaky opening, Tiger Woods rallied to win the PGA Grand Slam of Golf for a seventh time in eight appearances, closing with a bogey-free 6-under 66, to defeat runner-up Jim Furyk by two strokes.

The winner of the 2006 British Open, PGA Championship and PGA Player of the Year Award, Woods began the final round three strokes behind Furyk, the 2006 Vardon Trophy winner and 2003 PGA Grand Slam of Golf Champion.

Woods finished the 36-hole tournament with an 8-under 136 total, to earn $500,000 – giving him $3.15 million in career Grand Slam winnings. Woods' domination included a career 66.75 stroke average at Poipu Bay Golf Course.

Furyk, the world's No. 2 golfer behind Woods, closed with a 71, to take home $300,000. U.S. Open Champion Geoff Ogilvy 74 was six strokes back and earned $250,000. Mike Weir 74 finished fourth at 1-over and earned $200,000.

Woods has owned Poipu Bay Golf Course, also winning in 1998, '99, '00, '01, '02 and '05. In his only other appearance in the event, Woods debuted as the runner-up to Ernie Els in 1997.

In 2005, Woods closed with a 64, to win by seven strokes over Phil Mickelson, despite losing six pounds because of a stomach virus.

Furyk opened with a 67, for a one-stroke lead over Ogilvy – and three-strokes ahead of Woods.

Weir and Furyk were selected as alternates, based on their performances in the four majors. Two spots were open because Woods claimed two majors and Masters winner Phil Mickelson declined to play.

2005 Tiger Woods has this thing about Poipu Bay Golf Course. He can dominate it without little sleep, stepping off a plane from the Orient. He also can march the fairways with a stomach virus and a bum ankle to produce a round that many can only dream about.

It doesn't matter what state of physical well being that Woods is in, he is the undeniable master of the Robert Trent Jones Jr.-designed layout and the PGA Grand Slam of Golf.

A two-time major champion this year, Woods won the 23rd edition of the exclusive season-ending event for the sixth time. He closed with an 8-under-par 64, highlighted by his making two eagles, for a seven-stroke victory over PGA Champion Phil Mickelson.

Woods finished with a 36-hole total of 13-under-par 131, followed by defending champion Mickelson, who had a 70, for 138. U.S. Open Champion Michael Campbell was third at 143, after a 70, and three-time major champion Vijay Singh, finished fourth at 144 after a 69. It was the worse showing for Singh, who had been runner-up in three previous appearances.

Woods' first place prize of $400,000 pushed his PGA Grand Slam career earnings to $2.65 million. Mickelson, who posted a career-best 59 in the event last year, earned $250,000, while Campbell collected $200,000 and Singh $150,000.

Some 48 hours after he had successfully defended his title in the Dunlop Phoenix tournament in Japan, Woods stepped on the first tee at Poipu Bay and attempted to get his round off to a good start. He bogeyed the first hole, got sick again, then steadily recovered, trailing Mickelson by two strokes after nine holes and gaining the lead for good by two-putting for a birdie on the par-5 14th hole.

He finished his opening round with four birdies on the back nine for a three-stroke margin over Mickelson on the 7,123-yard oceanside layout.

2004 Phil Mickelson capped a year of self-discovery with yet another realization that his enigmatic talent knows few limits.

Mickelson broke golf's version of the sound barrier, shooting 59 in the PGA Grand Slam of Golf, a 13-under-par round that gave him a record tying 36-hole 127 total and a five-stroke victory over Vijay Singh.

"It feels a little like a fluke," Mickelson said. "I wasn't really sharp. It just all kind of came together. I don't really have an explanation for it."

Returning from a two-week layoff for his final appearance of the year, Mickelson carded 28 on the front nine with six birdies and an eagle. Four more birdie putts dropped on the back nine before he stood over a 9-footer for eagle at No. 18 and a chance to shoot 58, missing by inches and tapping in for 31 on the back nine of the 7,081-yard Poipu Bay course at Hyatt Regency Kauai in Hawaii.

An asterisk will accompany Mickelson's score, though, because the PGA Grand Slam of Golf is not an official PGA Tour event. PGA Tour records recognize Al Geiberger, Chip Beck and David Duval as the only players to shoot 59 in official tournaments.

Annika Sorenstam accomplished the feat on the LPGA tour. And Shigeki Maruyama of Japan produced a 58 during qualifying for the 2000 U.S. Open.

Mickelson's previous career-low score was 61 in the 2001 Greater Hartford Open. His low round this year was 63 in the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic.

Mickelson needed only 24 putts, 11 on the front nine. He made no bogeys.

It finished an amazing breakthrough year for Mickelson, who won his first major title in The Masters, finished second in the U.S. Open, third in the British Open and tied for sixth in the PGA Championship.

2003 Jim Furyk cruised to an eight-stroke victory in his first appearance in the PGA Grand Slam of Golf, but the joy of carrying off the first prize of $400,000, and dominating three major champion competitors may have been surpassed by a comment by an unidentified island native. "Someone called me 'kamaaina' ('local' the other day, which is pretty interesting," said Furyk, the U.S. Open Champion, who posted a closing 4-under-par 68 for a 36-hole total of 9-under-par 135 and an eight-stroke victory margin over Masters Champion Mike Weir. "That's an honor, kind of calling me that I'm from Hawaii, so it was fun. They always like to see that in the fans, just having fun with them."

Though Furyk is a bona fide "grinder," he had reason to feel loose during the 21st PGA Grand Slam of Golf. In winning his fourth career event in Hawaii, he recorded 11 birdies, which was just four behind the combined total of his three major champion competitors. Furyk also had just two bogeys and needed only 55 putts over the two days on tricky, grainy greens, including 26 in the final round.

The elite foursome represented the first quartet of first-time major champions in the history of the PGA Grand Slam of Golf. The last year all four majors were won by first-time champions was 1969, a decade before The PGA of America established the special season-ending event.

Furyk, who owns a home on Maui, came into the PGA Grand Slam of Golf having earned more than $1.8 million in Hawaii. He won the 2001 Mercedes Championships in the Islands, the 1996 Hawaiian Open and the now-defunct Kapalua Invitational in 1995. Furyk, who won twice this year on the PGA Tour and finished fourth on the money list, was never seriously threatened. He opened the event with a 67, good for a five-stroke lead over Weir, the Masters Champion.

Weir, the first Canadian to win a major, closed with a 71 to earn $250,000. PGA champion Shaun Micheel shot a 70 to finish 10 strokes back at 145 and collect $200,000. British Open champion Ben Curtis was another shot behind after a final-round 73 and made $150,000. Furyk held off his opponents with strong iron play, maintained his five-stroke advantage at the turn and birdied Nos. 10, 12 and 14 to pull away.

20TH PGA GRAND SLAM OF GOLF

2002 Tiger Woods surprised even himself in continuing his dominance at the PGA Grand Slam of Golf.

Woods captured the annual showdown of major champions for a fifth straight time with a tournament- and course-record final round of 11-under-par 61. The performance came under the swirling trade winds on the 7,081-yard Poipu Bay Golf Course on Kauai, Hawaii.

Woods' performance matched his lowest professional competitive round. He turned in a 61 in the NEC World Series of Golf and the World Cup. "I played better in this one," said Woods. "I really couldn't mis-hit a shot today. Every shot I hit was right in the middle of the face."

The Masters and U.S. Open Champion this year, Woods finished with a record 17-under-par 127 to win by 14 strokes over Justin Leonard and Davis Love III – alternates who earned a berth based on the Major Champions Points Standings this year. British Open Champion Ernie Els did not compete due to a scheduling conflict. Reigning PGA Champion Rich Beem finished fourth at 1-over-par 145. Love posted a 69, while Leonard had a 72 and Beem struggled to a 73.

Woods opened his round in muggy conditions with a light drizzle, sailing to his second straight bogey-free round. He birdied six of the first eight holes, putting the event out of reach for his opponents. Woods made the turn with a course-record 30, gaining an eight-stroke lead over Leonard. He pulled away on the back nine with birdies at Nos. 12, 13, 15, 16 and 18. He also lipped a couple other birdie putts. Even when he was in a little trouble, like his approach shot on No. 2 that found the right bunker, Woods found a way out. His shot out of the sand landed within a foot for a birdie putt. It was his seventh victory this season in 21 events. He had five wins on the PGA Tour. Woods shattered his own tournament mark of 12-under 132, set in 2001 in his three-stroke victory over David Toms. The 14-stroke win also was the widest margin of victory in the PGA Grand Slam of Golf since 1982, when Bill Rogers defeated David Graham by five strokes.

* PGA Grand Slam of Golf 36-hole record

Tiger Woods

2001 Tiger Woods' pre-Thanksgiving excursion to Hawaii was once again a feast at the expense of his fellow major champions.

The world's No. 1-ranked player and Masters Champion, Woods erased the previous 36-hole scoring record with a final-round 7-under-par 65, to post a 12-under-par 132 and win a record fourth consecutive PGA Grand Slam of Golf title, at Poipu Bay Golf Course and Hyatt Regency Kauai Resort & Spa.

PGA Champion David Toms, who eagled the 18th hole for a 67, finished three strokes behind Woods at 135. U.S. Open Champion Retief Goosen, the first-round leader, was third after a closing 71 at 137, and British Open Champion David Duval was never a factor, with a finishing round of 72 and 148 total.

Woods broke the tournament record of 11-under-par by Ernie Els in 1997 and moved past Greg Norman for the all-time victory record. Norman owns titles in 1986, 1993 and 1994.

Woods, a Grand Slam runner-up in 1997, won another $400,000 first-place prize to bring his PGA Grand Slam of Golf earnings to $1,850,000. In five visits to Kauai, Woods has dominated both match play (1998, '99 and stroke play formats (1997, 2000, '01. His cumulative scorecard features five eagles, 48 birdies, 14 bogeys and one double bogey.

Woods jumped out early in the closing round, with birdies on five of the first seven holes. He made the turn at 4-under 32. He started the day a stroke behind Goosen, but took the lead for good with a five-foot birdie putt on the 573-yard sixth, after hitting a 320-yard drive and a 252-yard approach with a 6-iron.

He coasted in the final three holes when Goosen and Toms bogeyed the 16th, giving him a three-stroke advantage with two holes to play. Yet, he finished with a flurry, making birdies on the final two holes. His 4-iron tee shot on the 220-yard 17th hole almost jumped into the cup.

* PGA Grand Slam of Golf 36-hole record

Tiger Woods

2000 Tiger Woods even amazed himself with his dramatic eagle-eagle finish in winning his third consecutive PGA Grand Slam of Golf at Poipu Bay Golf Course and Hyatt Regency Kauai Resort & Spa in Kauai, Hawaii.

"I've never done something like this before – with everything on the line," Woods said after eagling the par-5 18th hole twice in a row to tie and beat Masters Champion Vijay Singh in a playoff. "It was nice to execute the way I wanted to."

Woods, also the 1998 and 1999 winner in the 36-hole tournament for the year's major champions, hit a 6-iron approach from 231 yards to eight feet, to set up his tying eagle in regulation.

In the playoff, Woods placed his second shot in almost the same spot on the green and calmly holed the putt to claim the $400,000 first prize. "Same putt, same line," Woods said.

Woods became the first player to win three consecutive PGA Grand Slam of Golf titles. He won the previous two in match play. Greg Norman also has three PGA Grand Slam victories (1986, '93, '94. Woods, who also was a PGA Grand Slam runner-up in 1997, has won $1,450,000 in his four appearances at Poipu Bay.

Singh birdied the playoff hole after missing a long eagle putt. Despite the exciting finish, Woods gave himself a chance to win by making a five-foot par-saving putt on No. 17. Woods, coming off a victory 72 hours earlier in the Johnnie Walker Classic in Thailand, won for the 11th time in 2000. He closed with a 4-under 68 and Singh had a 70 to tie at 5-under-par 139. Tom Lehman shot a 70 to finish third at 143, and Paul Azinger had a 74 for a 148 total. Lehman made an early move, making the turn in 3-under 33 to move into a tie with Singh. But a double-bogey on No. 13 knocked him out of contention. Azinger couldn't recover from an opening 74. He picked up one stroke on the second hole, but a pair of bogeys on two of the first three holes coming in and a double-bogey at the 14th ended his hopes.

Tiger Woods

1999 Tiger Woods arrived at Poipu Bay Resort Golf Course without the benefit of a practice round. Fresh from a victory in the World Cup of Golf, Woods had only a few hours to spare before competing in the PGA Grand Slam of Golf.

Woods gathered himself and found his rhythm with birdies on the 12th, 14th and 15th holes to defeat British Open Champion Paul Lawrie, 3 and 2. A day later, Woods combined an eagle and two birdies on the front nine to build a commanding lead over alternate and past PGA Champion Davis Love III, on the way to a 3-and-2 triumph. Woods joined Greg Norman (1993-94 as the only back-to-back winners of the PGA Grand Slam of Golf.

Woods set the tone for the championship match on the first hole, sinking an eight-foot birdie putt, after Love had made his birdie putt from 12 feet. He went on to eagle the second hole and build a 5-up lead through eight holes. Love trimmed the deficit to 3-up with a pair of back nine birdies, but was unable to make up ground after that. Woods closed the match with a par on the 16th hole.

The PGA Player of the Year and Vardon Trophy winner, Woods capped his season with his 10th worldwide victory in his last 14 starts. Woods' win was worth $400,000 from a $1 million purse, bringing his overall earnings to $1,050,000 in three consecutive appearances in the PGA Grand Slam of Golf. He finished second in 1997.

Love, who replaced the late U.S. Open Champion Payne Stewart, cruised to the final match with a 6 and 5 first-round conquest of Masters Champion José Maria Olazábal. Love went out with a 7-under par 29 on the front nine with five birdies and an eagle. He closed out Olazábal with birdie on the par-4 12th hole.

Olazábal finished third after Lawrie suffered stretched ligaments in his right ankle and was forced to concede the match after nine holes. Lawrie, who was treated in a nearby hospital, had tripped over rocks on his way between the ninth green and 10th tee. Olazábal had gained a 1-up lead at that point.

16TH PGA GRAND SLAM OF GOLF

1998 Faced with wind gusts of nearly 35 miles per hour and occasional squalls that peppered the Poipu Bay Resort Golf Course, Tiger Woods played with patience, instead of his familiar go-for-broke style to capture his first PGA Grand Slam of Golf title.

With the PGA Grand Slam of Golf format converted from stroke to match play, Woods called upon the course management talents that helped him win three consecutive U.S. Amateur titles. He defeated Vijay Singh, 2-up, in the Championship match and became the youngest PGA Grand Slam of Golf winner (22 and the second alternate to earn the title. Greg Norman (1994 was the first alternate to capture the crown among a field of the winners of the year's four major championships. Woods gained the championship match by defeating U.S. Open Champion Lee Janzen, 3 and 2, in the opening round.

Singh reached the final match after dispatching Masters and British Open winner Mark O'Meara, 2-up, in the first round. It was a measure of redemption after O'Meara cruised past Singh, 11 and 10, in the World Match Play Championship a month earlier in England. Janzen came back to defeat O'Meara, 1-up, in the third-place match. Janzen never led until the 17th hole.

"It was a rough day," said Woods. "Conditions were awfully hard, very difficult, very demanding. You had to be very patient, execute the shots you had to execute, and keep your patience.

"Today was one of those days if you lose your patience, you lose the match very quickly."

1997 Displaying the form and putting stroke that carried him to two major championship titles, Ernie Els posted a final-round 7-under-par 65 under soggy conditions to win the MasterCard PGA Grand Slam at Poipu Bay Resort Golf Course and Hyatt Regency Kauai in Kauai, Hawaii.

Els' final round, the lowest score in a Grand Slam event at Poipu Bay, gave him an event-record 11-under-par 133, a stroke better than 1996 Champion Tom Lehman. Els also became the first U.S. Open Champion to win the title in the $1 million event since the format was converted to 36 holes in 1991.

Els, 27, took control in the first nine holes of the final round. He grabbed the lead for good with a birdie on the par-3 seventh hole. He made one bogey, at the par-4 16th, but cruised to a three-stroke victory over Masters winner Tiger Woods.

Woods, 21, opened the event with a 66, but scrambled to a 70 in the final round. PGA Champion Davis Love III, who began his final round with four birdies in the first five holes, cooled down after that for a 67 and finished at 138. British Open winner Justin Leonard, 25, struggled in his Grand Slam debut with rounds of 77 and 72.

"Coming in here, I thought I was a little rusty," said Els, who took two weeks off following the regular-season ending Tour Championship to rest, "But playing the golf course three years ago probably helped me a little bit this week, especially reading the greens. I had a bit of a feel for the golf course coming in this week."

Els' scorecard was a model of steadiness, as he hit 30 greens, made 14 birdies, only three bogeys and needed just 59 putts.

Woods made just one birdie on the front nine of the final round, at the par-5 second hole. He lost momentum after reaching the par-5, 575-yard sixth hole in two shots, but three-putted for par. From there on, Woods struggled with his driver, but made four par-saving putts on the final nine holes.

"My round today was, I guess, untidy," said Woods. "I hit some bad shots. I didn't drive the ball well at all. And Ernie got off to a great start. I didn't give myself any chances down the stretch. I tried to give myself a few more chances. By then, it was pretty much over."

1996 The most consistent performer in the year's major championships, Tom Lehman capped a remarkable season by setting the 36-hole scoring record and winning the MasterCard PGA Grand Slam of Golf at the Poipu Bay Resort Golf Course and Hyatt Regency Kauai Resort & Spa in Kauai, Hawaii. Rain postponed play for one day, but the sun returned for the final 36 holes, and the 37-year-old Lehman was in the spotlight.

The reigning PGA Player of the Year and Vardon Trophy winner had rounds of 68 and 66 for a 10-under-par 134. Lehman's performance bettered by one stroke Ian Woosnam's 1991 record.

"I'm excited," said Lehman. "To play against three other champions of the majors and to win – it's a neat feeling. It's nice to come up and play well. I love it. I'm glad we played well."

Steve Jones, who had defeated Lehman on the final hole of the U.S. Open, shot 66 to finish two strokes back at Poipu Bay. Jones started hot with a 31 on the front nine of the final round, before cooling off on the back nine. Jones and Lehman's 66 matched Greg Norman's 1994 score as the lowest in Grand Slam competition at Poipu Bay.

Masters winner Nick Faldo, who opened with a 67, struggled in with a 72 to finish third at 139, while PGA Champion Mark Brooks was fourth at 147, after a 73.

Lehman took control of the MasterCard PGA Grand Slam of Golf with a birdie on the first hole of the second round and never relinquished the lead. He birdied the 10th and 18th holes of the second round, with Jones posing the only serious challenge. Jones' chip to within inches of the cup on the par-5 18th just missed for an eagle, but Lehman two-putted from 35 feet for a closing birdie.

"Look at the record," said Jones of Lehman, his close friend. "No doubt about scoring average, and when you play with him it's incredible. It just seems like every hole he hits it within 15, 20 feet. He really has his swing under control."

Lehman's 36-hole performance was not surprising considering his practice round. He had a 64 two days before the event to tie the course mark shared with PGA apprentice Aaron Bengoechea, of Kona, Hawaii, whose score was recorded in a non-competitive round in December 1995.

1995 Ben Crenshaw didn't seize the lead in the MasterCard PGA Grand Slam of Golf until his final stroke on the Poipu Bay Resort Golf Course and Hyatt Regency Kauai Resort & Spa in Kauai, Hawaii. Crenshaw's dramatics – the only eagle in the prime-time televised event – capped a special year for the reigning Masters Champion.

Crenshaw's 50-yard sand wedge approach to the par-5, 550-yard 18th hole bounced once and struck the flagstick before settling into the bottom of the cup. Crenshaw finished with a 4-under-par 68, 36-hole total of 140 and a first-place prize of $400,000 in the $1 million event which brings together the year's four major champions.

"Luck really smiled on me out there," said Crenshaw, who earned the largest paycheck of his 22-year professional career. "I've had some wonderful moments. I feel blessed on occasion. I was blessed."

PGA Champion Steve Elkington and U.S. Open Champion Corey Pavin shared second place at 3-under-par 141, earning $225,000 each after recording 70s. British Open Champion John Daly finished fourth for the second time in this event, and his 73–148 total was worth $150,000.

Elkington and Pavin made gallant bids on the 18th hole to force a playoff. Elkington's 70-foot greenside bunker approach came to rest on the lip of the cup, and Pavin's 35-foot eagle putt attempt rolled a few inches short to the right. Daly finished with a 73 for a 4-over-par 148.

"That's one of the luckiest shots I've ever hit," Crenshaw said. "I was trying to hit somewhat of a running shot as I was going down the grain. And I gave it a little too much gas with my right hand. You can't say enough about Steve Elkington's shot. That, by all rights, should have gone in the hole."

12TH PGA GRAND SLAM OF GOLF

1994 Greg Norman, the first alternate to compete in the PGA Grand Slam of Golf since the format was reorganized in 1991, took advantage of his prodigious driving ability and 10-mile-an-hour trade winds to become the first back-to-back winner of the PGA Grand Slam of Golf. Norman capped a bogey-free, 6-under-par 66 final round with a five-foot eagle-3, for a 36-hole total of 136, a stroke off the 1991 record by Ian Woosnam.

PGA and British Open winner Nick Price, the PGA Player of the Year, was three strokes back after a final-round 69 and a 139 total worth $250,000. Price closed to within a stroke of Norman at the 10th hole, but fell two strokes back with a bogey at the 16th. U.S. Open winner Ernie Els earned $200,000 for third after a 71-143, and Masters winner José Maria Olazábal, who was never in contention after a first-round 74, finished at even-par 144 and won $150,000. The foursome combined for 28 birdies during the two rounds on the Robert Trent Jones-designed course along Kauai's southeastern shore.

Norman hit a 234-yard 5-iron approach on the 18th hole to set up his eagle putt. Such shotmaking was common during the PGA Grand Slam of Golf's first visit to Poipu Bay Resort.

"It was actually fun to play in conditions like this," said Norman. "You get to play shots you never practice: 400-yard drives, a 5-iron from 120 yards, and an 8-iron from 200 yards, all of which you usually don't have. You can throw the yardage book out the window."

1993 The most difficult tournament there is in which to earn a berth proved to be one of the most difficult in which to achieve par. The 1993 PGA Grand Slam of Golf was a struggle for the winners of golf's four major championships on the 7,126-yard Jack Nicklaus Resort Course. In 36 holes, there were 11 balls hit into the water, two out of bounds and a total of 18 penalty strokes.

However, British Open winner Greg Norman survived long enough by putting together rounds of 71 and 74, for a winning 1-over-par 145 total. Norman won $400,000, the biggest paycheck of his 17-year career and hiked his overall 1993 earnings to $2,227,268. PGA Champion Paul Azinger finished two strokes back at 147, earning $250,000, and Masters winner Bernhard Langer and U.S. Open winner Lee Janzen tied for third to earn $175,000 each. Janzen crept to within a stroke of Norman after 35 holes, then disaster struck. He sculled a 4-iron from a fairway bunker on the 18th hole and plopped it into the water. He settled for a double-bogey.

In fact, Norman's total was two strokes higher than the fourth-place Grand Slam finishes of former PGA Champion John Daly (1991 and Nick Faldo (1992. Norman's opening round and Langer's closing 70 were the only sub-par rounds. The four players teamed for some rare high numbers, including two triple-bogeys and four double-bogeys.

"Sometimes you win pretty, sometimes you win ugly," said Norman. "In fishing terms, this was a mackerel in the moonlight – shining one minute, smelly the next."

1992 PGA Champion Nick Price's putter, which had been his salvation in the 74th PGA Championship three months earlier, was the difference in holding off U.S. Open winner Tom Kite, for the $400,000 first prize at the Jack Nicklaus Resort Course at PGA West in La Quinta, Calif.

Price dropped birdie putts on the 16th and 18th holes for a bogey-free 67 that tied the streaking Kite with a two-day total of 7-under-par 137. Opening five strokes behind Price, Kite pulled even heading into the 18th hole. Kite birdied the final hole, after a memorable 170-yard 5-iron recovery shot from a fairway bunker landed within 14 feet of the flagstick. Price made his 15-foot birdie putt, and wrapped up the Championship less ceremoniously on the first playoff hole with a par. Kite's chances faded when his approach shot landed in a steep greenside bunker. Kite's marvelous 10-under-par 62, one of the finest rounds in 1992, featured 10 birdies, an eagle, and two bogeys. He earned $250,000. Masters winner Fred Couples was third at 142, collecting $200,000, while British Open winner Nick Faldo finished at 143 to earn $150,000.

"It's been a dream year for me," said Price. "This has really capped off a great year for me. The PGA Championship was by far the biggest. I have an opportunity now to play in all the great events in the world. These events are the icing on the cake. This is what I worked all my life for, to get in all the really great events."

For the first time since the event was introduced in 1979, all four current winners of golf's major championships competed in the PGA Grand Slam of Golf. The format was expanded to a 36-hole, two-day event in November. Not only were golf's "Big Four" winners able to meet the commitment, but they played for a $1 million purse. A key figure in providing more media attention and player attention on the PGA Grand Slam of Golf was PGA Executive Director and Chief Executive Officer Jim L. Awtrey. He began negotiations with TBS Sports, which had televised the Hawaiian Open in prime time and was eager to expand its golf coverage.

The event was a success with both media and player interest. Masters winner Ian Woosnam, ranked No. 1 in the world, knocked in four consecutive birdie putts on his final four holes to post a 9-under-par 135 and win the $400,000 first-place prize. The winner of the British Open, Ian Baker-Finch was four strokes back, and earned $250,000; while U.S. Open winner Payne Stewart shot 141 to finish in third place for $200,000; and PGA Champion John Daly finished at 143, worth $150,000.

EIGHTH PGA GRAND SLAM OF GOLF

For the first time in its history, the PGA Grand Slam of Golf had to search the celebrity ranks to fill a last-minute void. Chicago Bears football coach Mike Ditka replaced 1989 U.S. Open Champion Curtis Strange, who was suffering from a stomach disorder. PGA President Patrick Rielly searched for a substitute who wouldn't disappoint a holiday crowd of nearly 3,000 golf fans, including 16 who paid $6,500 apiece to play 18 holes with the professionals.

Ditka, carrying a 7 handicap, didn't turn in a scorecard. Meanwhile, two-time U.S. Open Champion Andy North won the event with a 2-under-par 70, while Craig Stadler, winner of the 1982 Masters, had a 74 and 1989 PGA Champion Payne Stewart a 75.

The PGA Grand Slam raised enough money to purchase $75,000 worth of clubs for juniors.

1989 With the 71st PGA Championship only two and a half months away at Kemper Lakes Golf Club, four professional contenders played the course under perhaps its toughest conditions. Winds whipped around at 25 miles per hour and gusted to 35, as a gallery of 5,200 watched two-time defending U.S. Open Champion Curtis Strange fire the day's low round of 1-over-par 73.

Craig Stadler, who had three of the group's four collective birdies, came home with a 75, while Ian Baker-Finch had a 76, and Greg Norman didn't report his score. Baker-Finch replaced 1988 PGA Champion Jeff Sluman, who withdrew after an appendectomy.

"Even par will be a good score if the wind is blowing in August like it was today," said Stadler. Once again, the PGA Junior Golf Foundation benefitted from a $100,000 donation from the Michael W. Louis Foundation.

SIXTH PGA GRAND SLAM OF GOLF

1988 Three of golf's biggest winners in 1987 and a champion from 1986 met at Kemper Lakes, a sprawling 7,217-yard layout groomed for the 1989 PGA Championship. Larry Nelson, the defending PGA Champion, fired a course record, 3-under-par 69 to win before a gallery of 6,000 in 93-degree weather. Masters winner Larry Mize and U.S. Open Champion Scott Simpson tied for runner-up at 70, and Greg Norman, winner of the 1986 British Open, substituting for '87 Champion Nick Faldo, came home with 73. Norman held the previous course record of 70.

"This is one of the best courses in the last 10 years to host a PGA Championship," said Nelson. "This is one of the best tests I've ever seen. The course is in great shape, and I'm very pleased that the PGA Championship will be here next year."

Norman delighted the crowd by cutting the doglegged 18th fairway with a mammoth drive of 325 yards over water. The ball came to rest 43 feet from the cup on the par-4, 433-yard hole. Later, trees were planted along the left-hand side of the fairway to prevent players from attempting the same shot in the PGA Championship.

The PGA Junior Golf Foundation received a gift of $100,000 from the Michael W. Louis Foundation. Said Norman, "I'll give all the time I have in the world for juniors. They're the next generation, and we have to help them as much as we can." Norman took leukemia-stricken Jamie Hutton of Wisconsin under his wing earlier in the year.

"You have to set an example for the young kids. Many kids waste their lives on drugs, but golf has an image that is very clean," said Norman.

1986

After a three-year hiatus, a dormant PGA Grand Slam of Golf was resurrected at Kemper Lakes Golf Club in Hawthorn Woods, Ill., site of the 1989 PGA Championship. The Michael W. Louis Foundation, a Chicago philanthropic organization which also administers other charitable, educational, religious and scientific programs, set up the PGA Grand Slam to run through 1990 at Kemper Lakes.

The revised format included 16 amateurs with the previous year's winners of golf's four major championships. Three winners of majors in 1986 – PGA Champion Bob Tway, British Open Champion Greg Norman and Masters Champion Jack Nicklaus – were joined by Fuzzy Zoeller. Norman became the first player to break par from the back tees on the 7,500-plus-yard championship course, finishing with a 2-under-par 70. Zoeller came in at 72, and Nicklaus, who dunked a tee shot on the par-3 17th into the water, joined Tway with a 75 on the demanding course.

The event raised $125,000 for junior golf. During the round, Norman clowned with Zoeller, planting a flagstick in a greenside bunker on the 18th hole, while awaiting his partner's arrival. Zoeller responded by playing his approach to within 12 feet of the empty hole. Sixteen amateurs paid $5,000 each to play in the special pro-am.

The PGA Grand Slam of Golf was postponed in 1987 because the winners of golf's major championships could not clear their schedules for the planned date. Masters Champion Larry Mize and U.S. Open Champion Scott Simpson committed for the event, but neither PGA Champion Larry Nelson nor British Open Champion Nick Faldo could make the date.

FOURTH PGA GRAND SLAM OF GOLF

1982

British Open Champion Bill Rogers, leading a foursome of winners of the 1981 major championships, captured the fourth PGA Grand Slam of Golf. Rogers turned in a 1-under-par 71 over the George and Tom Fazio creation – the 7,137-yard Champion Course at PGA National Golf Club. PGA Champion Larry Nelson was runner-up with a 75, while U.S. Open Champion David Graham shot 76, and Masters Champion Tom Watson had a 78.

The foursome played under near-perfect conditions and before a gallery of between 2,500 and 3,000. However, Nelson was the only member of the quartet not to have walked 36 holes the day before in the rain-marred Inverrary Classic in Landerhill, Fla. Nelson wasn't entered in the tournament and drove to Palm Beach Gardens from Daytona Beach. The players generally praised the Champion Course, which would be the site of the 1983 Ryder Cup and the 1987 PGA Championship. "I've played a lot of rounds on courses I've never seen," said Rogers. "I like the course, and I love the greens and fairways. We were lucky today we didn't see it in the wind."

There was no prize money involved, with all proceeds going to junior golf, but the low scorer traditionally awards $1,000 in his name to his favorite golf charity. Rogers donated the money to the junior golf program at Northridge Country Club in his hometown, Texas.

1981 Lee Trevino shined among one of golf's most heralded quartets at Breakers West Golf Course in West Palm Beach, Fla. Trevino fired a 3-under-par 68 over the par-71, 7,100-yard layout, playing in winds that gusted to 35 miles per hour.

Tom Watson finished runner-up with a 71, while Jack Nicklaus finished at 1-over-par 72, and Spain's Seve Ballesteros at 75. A gallery estimated between 4,000 and 5,000 paid $25 each as a contribution to the PGA of America's Junior Golf Foundation. Trevino was presented the PGA Grand Slam Trophy by Vice President George Bush.

"The golf Lee played today was phenomenal," said Nicklaus, who couldn't overcome a double-bogey start. "It was the best I've seen under these conditions in a long time." Trevino had four birdies and a three-putt bogey to match the best-ball score of his three opponents.

It was the most successful PGA Grand Slam of Golf in the three years of its existence, grossing more than $125,000 for junior golf, in addition to funds raised for the American Cancer Society, a participating sponsor along with the Economic Council of the Palm Beaches and Munsingwear, Inc.

"I think I had an advantage today," said Trevino, who donated $1,000 to the Southern Methodist University women's golf team. "Ballesteros just came over from Spain a week ago. Tom Watson has been in the snow in Kansas City for a couple of weeks (actually Watson was working out in Florida, and Nicklaus missed the cut last week in Doral. And I've done nothing but practice for this match for the past two months."

1980 Opening its doors to the national golf spotlight for the first time in a decade, Hazeltine National Golf Club hosted the PGA Grand Slam of Golf, and invited 1979 Tournament Players Championship winner Lanny Wadkins, 1979 PGA Champion David Graham, 1979 U.S. Open Champion Hale Irwin and 1979 Masters Champion Fuzzy Zoeller. Wadkins birdied the 18th hole for a 1-under-par 71 to finish two strokes ahead of Irwin and three ahead of Graham and Zoeller.

Between 2,500 and 3,000 spectators followed the players over a course that had suffered severe criticism during one of its proudest moments, hosting the 1970 U.S. Open.

At that time, Dave Hill spent a post-first round press conference criticizing the course, claiming it "lacked only cows and corn to be a real pasture." Irwin said the stigma would likely remain with the course. However, the design was drastically changed by the time Hazeltine hosted the 1991 U.S. Open.

Irwin admonished the media after the PGA Grand Slam exhibition: "Here we are facing you guys, and all we're being asked about is what we think of the golf course. Nobody's asking about junior golf, and that was supposed to be the reason we came here. We're not here to run a critique of Hazeltine. We're here to promote junior golf."

INAUGURAL PGA GRAND SLAM OF GOLF

Oak Hill's East Course, renovated by architects George and Tom Fazio over a two-year period, hosted the inaugural PGA Grand Slam of Golf. The event was designed to benefit the PGA's Junior Golf Foundation. Winners of the 1978 four major championships competed: PGA Champion John Mahaffey, British Open Champion Jack Nicklaus, Masters Champion Gary Player and U.S. Open Champion Andy North. The par-

70, 6,974-yard course made it rough on the foursome, with North and Player sharing top honors with 73s and the $12,000 Steuben Trophy. Mahaffey and Nicklaus struggled home with 7-over-par 77s.

Spectators were charged $25 or $30 to view the event, and another $100 to attend an evening awards presentation featuring the contestants, former President Gerald Ford, entertainers Pat Boone and Foster Brooks and sportscaster Chris Schenkel, the master of ceremonies.

A junior clinic preceded the 18-hole round, but any hopes of a tournament atmosphere for 5,000 spectators faded when players began conceding three- and four-foot putts. But the gallery was entertained by the joking and the opportunity to chat with their heroes.

After expenses, the PGA's Junior Golf Foundation netted more than $75,000.
